Thursday's press conference will announce the introduction of "The Children's Safety Act of 2005." This bipartisan legislation addresses a number of child crime issues, including violent crimes against children, sexual crimes against children, sexual exploitation of children, and protection of foster and adopted children. This comprehensive legislation was drafted in response to the recent horrific attacks and murders of Jessica Lunsford, Sarah Lunde, Jetseta Gage, and others who have recently been killed by sex offenders. "The Children's Safety Act" is expected to be considered in July by the House Judiciary Committee.
